

Artemis

Earth paintings by Lucy Hersey and ceramics by Tracy Murray.

Little Oberon Gallery, Fish Creek,
January 2022

With this new collection of paintings I have attempted to expand and develop my techniques for painting with earth. My intention has been to say more, with less – with deeper focus and celebration of the materials and the true colours of the pigments. Using no synthetic additives or binders – these paintings are made entirely with raw earth, plant pigments and my hands, grinding and massaging the colours, often in dry form, into the canvas, to create smudgy and soft landscapes.

These paintings are concerned as always with landscapes that have left their mark on me, but particularly with the elements of place and how they are experienced. Warm, shallow water rippling across rocks, moving clouds, the way a wave drags the sand as it pulls back to the ocean – and the interjecting pangs of nostalgia which is becoming an unshakeable theme in my work.

Little Oberon Gallery Café, Lucy Hersey and Tracy Murray warmly invite you to Artemis. The show will open January 1 and be open to the public Friday to Monday, 9am–2pm.

Purchasing

Paintings are available for direct purchase from Lucy Hersey via email lucyhersey@live.com during the pre-sale period before January 1. After this period please contact or visit the gallery to purchase work.

Purchased work can be collected from the gallery at the conclusion of the exhibition, or afterwards from my Loch studio.

Australia wide delivery for paintings can be arranged, please contact Lucy to discuss details and a quote.

“My ceramics are made by hand and hold imperfections, showing the small makers marks and imprints that only handmade products can. They are meant to be held in your hands and used every day, not just reserved for special occasions. Every day is special, and damn awesome – mostly! I use a variety of methods to form my work, pinching and slab rolling, using different clays and glazes as the mood takes me. I don't make large runs of product, I make small individual works. When you own one of my pieces you will have an original that you won't find elsewhere.”
